

Marie Colvin (The United States) IS THE WINNER OF THE 2012 RAW in WAR ANNA POLITKOVSKAYA AWARD

“Covering a war means going to places torn by chaos, destruction, and death, and trying to bear witness. It means trying to find the truth in a sandstorm of propaganda when armies, tribes or terrorists clash...”

Journalists covering combat shoulder great responsibilities and face difficult choices. Sometimes they pay the ultimate price...

Is it worth the cost in lives, heartbreak, loss? Can we really make a difference? I faced that question when I was injured. In fact one paper ran a headline saying, has Marie Colvin gone too far this time? My answer then, and now, was that it is worth it.

Our mission is to speak the truth to power. We send home that first rough draft of history. We can and do make a difference in exposing the horrors of war and especially the atrocities that befall civilians!

The real difficulty is having enough faith in humanity to believe that enough people be they government, military or the man on the street, will care when your file reaches the printed page, the website or the TV screen!

We do have that faith because we believe we do make a difference. • “ Marie Colvin,

Address given at a service for war wounded at St. Bride’s Church, London, 2010

This year’s winner is a unique woman, a courageous war correspondent, who dedicated her life to reporting from the frontline of almost every major conflict in recent history. From the war in the Balkans to the armed conflict in Chechnya to the wave of revolutions that ignited the Arab Spring “ Marie Colvin was there, bearing witness and giving a voice to those caught up in the heart of the “sandstorm”. She did speak truth to power. She exposed the horrors of war and made a difference.

We honour Marie Colvin for her courage, integrity and passion for truth. She lived a life of courage and truth-telling in the face of grave danger, just as Anna did, and paid for it with her life.

One of the most experienced and noted war correspondents of her generation Marie Colvin lost her life on 22 February 2012 while reporting from the besieged city of Homs, in Western Syria. She had defied the ban on foreign journalists imposed by the Syrian government and entered the country on the back of a motorcycle “ensuring the world would hear about the atrocities against civilians that continue there to this day; hoping that the world would care.
